

Organizations that Cool Planet supported in 2020

The Cool Planet Working Group receives a portion (typically 10%) of the Social Justice budget, and we distribute that to non-profits working in areas that are particularly aligned with our goals. In 2020 we prioritized organizations involved in environment justice, in addition to faith-based environmental groups and local environmental partners. Here is our summary for 2020:

Earthjustice is the nation's original and largest nonprofit environmental law organization. They exist "because the Earth needs a good lawyer" and "are holding the government to our environmental laws and advancing protections for all." www.earthjustice.org

The Center for Biological Diversity leads programs that deal with environmental health, energy justice, and sustainability. www.biologicaldiversity.org

The Amah Mutsun Land Trust is the vehicle by which the Amah Mutsun access, protect, and steward lands that are integral to their identity and culture. www.amahmutsunlandtrust.org

Solar Cookers International, by supporting effective carbon-free solar cooking in world regions of greatest need, also provides health benefits to the people there. www.solarcookers.org

350 Silicon Valley empowers local residents to make a difference in the effort to fight climate change and transition to 21st century energy sources. www.350siliconvalley.org

TransForm believes that "all Californians should be able to live in healthy, connected communities with great options to get where we need to go." www.transformca.org

The Tuolumne River Trust promotes stewardship of the Tuolumne and is doing important work with the State Water Resources Control Board. www.tuolumne.org

GreenFaith's mission is "to inspire, educate and mobilize people of diverse religious backgrounds for environmental leadership." They believe that "protecting the earth is a religious value, and that environmental stewardship is a moral responsibility."
